

Jason King
Director, CAPE National Executive Committee

I feel it is important for CAPE and the National Executive Committee to have a strong voice in representing members' interests as the workplace is defined more broadly and new challenges are presented.

In my day-to-day life I am personally and professionally interested in emerging science, research, and innovation policy. My recent involvement as a co-chair of the CAPE NEC Digital Technology and Transformation subcommittee helps bring these interests together to better situate member interests now and in the future.

In the past I helped create and grow a registered non-profit organization serving new Canadians. Within CAPE I am actively engaged in helping advance issues related to member representation, good financial stewardship, persons with disabilities, and equity-deserving populations.
